“The story behind the data, through the eyes of citizens”

DATE: November 1, 2006

RE: October 2006 Mini CFSR Review; District 5 and Region 1

Safety:

The outcome of safety is divided into two subcategories: “Safety 1” (children are, first and foremost, protected from abuse and neglect and “safety 2” (children are safely maintained in their homes whenever possible and appropriate).

Permanency:

The outcome of permanency is divided into two categories: “Permanency 1” (children have permanency and stability in their living situations” and “permanency 2” (the continuity of family relationships and connections is preserved for children).

Thermopolis case – Independent living skills were needed by the young man, but none appeared to be available.

The language we use with children as we move them towards permanency is often times misunderstood and misused giving the child a feeling of no permanency.

Well Being:

The outcome of well being is divided into three categories: “Well-being 1” (families have enhanced capacity to provide for their children’s needs), “well-being 2” (children receive appropriate services to meet their educational needs) and “well-being 3” (children receive adequate services to meet their physical and mental health needs).

Contributing Factors:

It is the intent of the Wyoming Citizen Review Panel to do more than just highlight data: The CRP looks for various observations that are worthy to note and may help to explain the story behind the data in an effort to promote best practices throughout the state.

Appendix B

Strengths

- Good coordination with DFS and caseworker
- Caseworker did a great job
- Many services offered for the child and family
- Child received his high school diploma
- Probation officer did a great job of keeping
- Child was in only one placement
- Good attempts at identifying all relatives for possible placement options
- Frequent visits between caseworker and child
- Great in home services for family
- Lifenet came in three hours per day to help mom learn how to keep a house
- Children's nutritional and health needs were being provided
- Good process for child transitioning from youth to adult in system
- Great health assessments
- Meticulously done case
- Good services provided (assessments) knowing that child would need some assistance in adulthood
- Great communication between team members working for child
- Great enrichment services through Casey Family Programs
- Narrative entries were right on target and timely
- Case file was complete
- Great exploration of resources
- Nearly monthly MDT's good communication between all members of the MDT and continued email contact amongst them
- Good consistency of providers
- Same counselor throughout the case
- Good contact with family
- Child benefited from the small town environment resulting in many good things being done for the child
- Child was able to stay connected to the community thanks to being placed in kinship care
- Great MDT work looking at needs of child and mom
- Mom received dental care and dentures
- Mom received medical assessments; placed on anti-depressants

Additional contributing factors

- Child aged out in care, but still felt that he could contact his parents or go come if necessary
- Does ICWA apply in juvenile services cases? If the child is in out of home, ICWA applies

- Often times when attorneys become involved, the matter gets so convoluted the child is forgotten about
- TPR is in process and dad is going to relinquish
- Need to work on IL program and get it more universal throughout the state
- High staff turnover with DFS offices
- State would benefit from increased number of foster families in Wyoming
- Teacher stepped forward and became a foster home
- Step siblings aunt stepped forward and became a foster home
- Great connections between foster homes and original residence
- Great partnering between bio parents and foster parents
- Mom said MDT was the greatest benefit in the case
- Because of Judge Hartmans leadership, the family is heard and their considerations, when appropriate, are incorporated into the decisions that are made; a great example of the benefits of family partnerships.

Opportunities for improvement

- Child needed to be held accountable
- Petition might have needed to be filed against parents and hold them accountable rather than just concentrating on child
- Mom and dad were not involved in case planning, however it was mom and dad's choice
- It may have been better for the child had DFS been an advocate for filing a neglect petition on behalf of the child
- Sheriff's office declined to investigate allegations of sexually perpetrated by mother's boyfriend of young man
- A search for relatives could have been more diligent
- Relatives were not thoroughly searched out; grandfather (who had legal custody previously) was not discovered until 32 months into the case and was an option for placement; he will be adopting the child
- Case plans need to be completed and in the file
- Family was told what was going to happen, not necessarily involved with regards to meaningful input. The GAL in the matter did not feel that the mother understood what was going on nor did she have meaningful input. Physical presence alone does not constitute parental involvement; because we did not get the parent's buy in and understanding of the case plan, there is a good chance that the family will come back into the system; caseworker acknowledged that "mom" did not get it
- No family partnership held which would have been helpful for the parents
- Listened to mom only and did not search for any other biological relatives.
- Lot of struggle with the independent living program, timeliness and whether these services could have been implemented
- Foster family may have needed more support
- A family partnership at the end of the case might have been helpful to transition the child into adulthood especially in the area of education finish up

- Permanency plan needed to change to reflect the current status of the case; moved to IL or OPLA
- In a six month time frame, there was only one phone call between caseworker and mom
- No documentation of a physical exam when child went into foster care; sexual abuse case
- No documentation of preventative dental care
- Concurrent planning was done and would have been useful in the case; concurrent planning may have been occurring, but was not in the case file
- Use family partnerships to further define the roles of those who are going into the home to provide services

Systemic barriers

- Child dropped out of school and there is nothing to keep the child engaged in the school process
- Difficult to get a county attorney to file a neglect petition on a 16 year old
- We are an incident based system, something must occur before DFS becomes involved...should the system become involved earlier in certain cases?
- Lacking placement resources in Wyoming; placing children with proximity to their families is preferable
- It appears that CHINS are the path of least resistance for prosecuting attorneys as opposed to filing neglect petitions; do we victimize children in the process of using CHINS inappropriately
- Judge dismissed case with baby born with meth in system as a criminal act; county attorney did not file a neglect petition, child was left in a very bad situation and eventually came back into care with a report in between of mom using meth.
- Qualifying a child for adult wavier services are somewhat cumbersome
- Disjoint between IEP and what could happen in that scenario and the adult wavier and what could happen in that scenario
- ICPC request on father might have been done earlier
- Residential treatment was not available for mom in area where child was in foster care; however the other four children were able to go with mom

District and regional goals:

Big picture issues:

- The more issues we (DFS) has to deal with locally, the more time we have to take away from doing social work and visiting with families; permanency will suffer.
